

what the duties on these would be under the Dingley law and the Aldrich measure.

La Follette Explains.
"With reference to the proceedings of last night which I did not attend," said La Follette, in opening his address, "and so far as they concern me personally, I have nothing to say except that I was forced to speak from 12 to 5 o'clock yesterday and I did not feel able nor under any obligations to go on last evening."

"I did not ask that business be suspended for me at the evening session. I did not tell anyone that I was ill. I was not. I was exhausted with the work of the day, due largely to the intense heat, as any other Senator would have been. I supposed that, others would participate in the discussion. I supposed, certainly, that before a vote was asked for on the cotton schedule the promise from the Senator from Rhode Island (Aldrich) to make a statement would be redeemed. A large number of paragraphs in the bill have been passed over with less excuse than that of last night."

Apologizes to Gallinger.
La Follette apologized to Gallinger (Rep., N. H.) for having refused to yield to him for an interruption yesterday, and Gallinger accepted his expressions.

La Follette said that he scanned the face of every Senator, when he spoke in his law practice, he saw the face of the jury, and that he had perhaps been irritated by the expressions of some of his colleagues.

As to the duties on cotton cloth, he said, they formed a subject that struck home to the prosperity and happiness of the people, and that he had no business to try to bring it into consideration.

Does Not Care.
He said that it was one of the least affairs of his life as to what effect upon himself in Wisconsin would be created by any vote he cast.

"I have never taken the easiest path," said he. "I could have done so, but I never have. Fifteen years have been carved out of my heart and of my life in a great struggle. I had a comfortable law practice, with an income sufficient to satisfy a man of moderate intelligence. But I got interested in subjects which go deep down into the fundamental constitutional principles of the government. I was dragged away from my profession in the study of these questions and in the effort to give Wisconsin a government by the people for the people."

"I would not be boastful, but something has been accomplished in that State during the last few years which draws students of economy from every State in the Union, from every educational institution here and many in Europe to the little capital to study the laws of Wisconsin, especially those relating to the control of corporations."

Has Been Attacked.
"I have been attacked and misrepresented and my motives have been lied about. I never answered the storm-beat upon me. When assailed and misrepresented, my only answer was that the corporations must pay their share of taxation, no more and no less, and I insisted that the State had a right to regulate their control of the highways."

"As for the attacks on me, they are insignificant. Great ideas thrust themselves into the arena, and the men who are drawn into the contest are but instruments."

"So I am not to be turned aside in this debate today to answer some petty and contemptible attacks upon me personally. The Senate was occupied yesterday for five hours in the consideration of important facts connected with this bill. Some sensationalism developed in the evening session, and it claimed."

What Congress Did

IN THE SENATE.

Senators La Follette and Penrose had an exciting clash as the result of the latter's attack on the former last night.

ed space in the newspapers to the exclusion of those facts. It shall not be true today with my consent."

LA FOLLETTE GETS RESOLUTION PASSED

Senate Asks President for All Correspondence About German Tariff Report.

There was another flurry over the German tariff statement in the Senate today. It occurred when the resolution of La Follette calling on the State Department to submit to the Senate all the correspondence involved in the securing of that statement from Germany.

Senator Smith of Michigan, strongly assailed the contribution of the Augsburg chamber of commerce to that statement. Smith denounced the reference to the standard of living in this country as a voluntary impertinence.

The tariff, he said, was to be based on the difference in wages. The standard of living of workmen in this country was their own business and the higher it was the more creditable to them. It was not the concern of any foreign interest and they had no business to try to bring it into consideration.

Heyburn (Rep., Idaho), thought it was not a serious offense for a private body of men to bring up the subject and said that as the American political platform and speakers often referred to the proper labor of Europe and poor living conditions there, they should have the same privilege. He did not expect to take much wisdom from these foreign reports on the tariff, but was surprised that they came in. La Follette's resolution was adopted without opposition.

BIG STABLES BURN; MEN JUST ESCAPE

MONMOUTH BEACH, N. J., June 4.—A fire, believed to have been of incendiary origin, totally destroyed the big delivery stables of Jesse P. Manshan, early today. Seven stable hands, all foreigners, were sleeping in the barn when the fire was discovered and barely had time to escape in their night clothes.

Two horses and a dozen carriages were destroyed. The loss is $15,000.

CHAMBER INVITES REYNOLDS TO SPEAK

Asked to Give Reasons for Advocating Change in Government.

James B. Reynolds, special investigator, who recommended to President Roosevelt that the form of District government be changed, will be invited to appear before the Washington Chamber of Commerce at his earliest convenience to explain more fully the details of his plans and the reasons for his recommendation.

E. H. Daniels, chairman of the special committee appointed by the Chamber to consider a change in the District government, will mail Mr. Reynolds a letter tonight extending the invitation. Mr. Reynolds is now in New York city.

The letter asks that Mr. Reynolds name a date upon which it will be convenient for him to appear before the Washington business men and express their desire to listen to his views in the near future.

In view of the fact approval given Mr. Reynolds' plan by President Taft, the latter now having the matter of a change in government under serious consideration, the visit and address of the investigator will have an especial significance. It probably will have its influence in aiding the special committee to arrive at a decision as to what attitude the Chamber of Commerce should take on the question.

MARINES REPLACE SAILORS.

MADEIRALLES, June 4.—Six hundred marines arrived here today from various French ports to serve as crews in the merchant marine, whose sailors are on strike. Nearly 1,000 marines are now employed as strike-breakers, and the shipping congestion is somewhat relieved.

SEEK TO BREAK WILL.

CHICAGO, June 4.—Henry L. Baldwin, J. W. Phillips and twenty-six others have brought suit to set aside the will of Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Straut, who died in the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, February 5, 1907. Mrs. Straut left $700,000 and willed most of it to three charities, leaving $150,000 to her relatives. One bequest was $10,000 to the Little Church Around the Corner, New York.

TAKE PONIES OFF BEACH.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 4.—Owners of the health ponies have at last surrendered to the edict of Chief of Police Woodruff in taking their animals from the strand during June, July, and August. Fear of losing the right to use the ponies at other times in the year is their excuse for yielding.

DECISION HELD UP IN GOMPERS CASE

Court of Appeals Will Not Give an Opinion Until Next October.

Leaving the decision of Gompers-Mitchell-Morrison contempt case to be announced after the reconvening of the District Court of Appeals next October, that judicial body today adjourned, after having rendered opinions in 138 cases out of the 203 cases submitted to them during the last year and establishing a new record.

Of the five cases held over until the next term, two are patent appeals, two are law cases, and the fifth is the Gompers appeal. The labor case deals with the appeal taken from the injunction issued by Justice Gould and made permanent by the labor men of the name of the Buck Stove and Range Company, of St. Louis, upon the "We Don't Patronize" list of the Federationist, labor's official organ.

By the announcement today that the Gompers case will remain unsettled for several months, the statement made by Mr. Gompers that the appeal before the United States courts would not interfere with his European trip and that he will return in the fall to learn the decision appears to be justified.

The big theater burned quickly, and being located on an eminence, lit up the country for miles.
